Custom made TPE profiles

Custom made profiles

We have an extensive range of standard profiles which we supply from stock. We are also specialists in the development, manufacture and supply of profiles made from TPE. We can produce a wide range of variety, shape and sizes that can meet the diverse needs of most applications.

TPE the best alternative to rubber and plastic

Elastic, pliable and flexible - these qualities are typical for rubber, a universally recognized material that takes many forms in our daily lives. It grows increasingly difficult, to determine the right material for a given product, water hoses, sealing rings, window seals or even basic door stops all feel like rubber, but they are often made from thermoplastic elastomers (TPE). The similarity to rubber is striking.

Rubber is a product made from natural or synthetic polymers. These polymers are a viscoplastic material which, when combined with crosslinking chemicals such as sulphur or peroxide and heated, can become elastic rubber. During this process of "vulcanisation", the thread-like molecules of the polymer become interlinked through the creation of chemical bonds. It is this interlinking which gives the product its elasticity. The vulcanisation process can only be reversed by destroying the substance with heat.

Thermoplastic elastomers (TPE) behave much differently. As the name implies, these substances become plastic when heated (Greek: thermos = heat), but become elastic again once they have cooled. Unlike the chemical interlinking within rubber, here the interlinking is physical. In terms of their structure and behaviour, TPE fall between plastics and elastomers. They are as workable as plastics while retaining the essential characteristics of rubber. Furthermore, TPEs are environment friendly. Unlike rubber, they can be recycled and reused.
